

{ A QUESTION OF JUSTICE }

When you are injured should you give a statement?

Insurance companies try to take statements from injury victims before they receive the advice of an attorney. These adjusters are trained to ask questions that close the door to fair justice – especially for damages that are not immediately apparent. You are not required to give a recorded statement – do not do so before speaking to a capable attorney.

How does the court system help good citizens?

Insurance companies seek to maximize profits – not to provide fair compensation to accident victims. The court system allows good citizens to obtain justice when insurance companies don't play fair. That's why it is so important to seek good counsel – and obtain justice.

Why are offshore workers protected by special laws?

Operators of oilfield vessels are given broad authority over their employees that does not exist in land based employment. Injuries frequently occur when that authority is abused. Special laws provide for just compensation when offshore workers are injured due to negligent operations or unseaworthy vessels. A capable maritime lawyer can help you obtain justice.

Why do injured victims seek legal counsel?

Our legal system places the cost of injuries on the negligent party. When an accident occurs an insurance company will try to preserve evidence that defends its interest – all other evidence may be lost. If you are injured, seek counsel to preserve the evidence that will assure that you obtain justice – not just what the insurance company wants to pay.
